

Integrated Clinical Systems, Inc. launches new eLearning Site for JReview®.

Frenchtown, NJ - April 16, 2010

Integrated Clinical Systems, Inc. (ICS) has launched our new eLearning Site for JReview® today. To check out a free training example, please visit <http://elearning.i-review.com>. This site can now be utilized by ICS's customers who purchase subscriptions to various online training courses for their users. This will enable these customers to more efficiently leverage their JReview software investment. Course access will give users the opportunity to gain the insight they need to better use JReview, thus increasing productivity. Our eLearning Site contains Web Based Training (WBT) courses and lessons designed to assist users in learning and using JReview to its fullest potential.

We went live today with our first JReview course offering, the Core Concepts Refresher. It contains lessons that review the same topics a user would have originally learned in one of our full Core Concepts Training classes, which would have either been held at our corporate headquarters in Frenchtown, NJ, at the customer's site, or over the internet via a live online meeting. The new refresher lessons will help these users remember how to use a specific feature or browser area within the software.

Eric S. Herbel, President of ICS said, "Our customers have been wanting an updated way to provide computer based, on-demand training for their users. So we decided to go with a web based training format so we could develop and dynamically update site content as new features are added or changes made to our products. This eLearning Site with all new content is the culmination of that effort."

Our next course offering, in development for release in May, is an Advanced Topics Refresher. We will also be adding other refreshers over time, as well as creating a full online training course designed to teach the product from the ground up. This full course will be complete with exercises, access to our training database, and quizzes.

We will have various subscription plans available with discounts based on the number of user licenses that are purchased. Please contact your Professional Services Account Representative, or e-mail us at services@i-review.com, to discuss your specific goals so we can tailor the right combination of eLearning courses and user licenses to fit your company's needs.
